WHEN DO YOU APPLY?

- When applying to colleges, it is important to understand the different admissions options that each school offers and to carefully consider which option is the best fit for you.

WHEN DO YOU APPLY?

- Regular Decision:

Students must submit an application by a specified date and they will receive a decision within a clearly stated period of time. This is a non-binding admission plan. If you are accepted to the college, you have until May 1st to decide if you will attend

- Rolling Admission:

No specific application deadline exists. Applications are reviewed as they are received, and admission decisions are sent out as they are determined. If accepted, you have until May 1st to decide if you will attend.

WHEN DO YOU APPLY?

- Early Action (EA):

Early Action applications typically have deadlines in November and December. Students who apply through early action will receive an admission decision earlier than the students who apply through regular decision. This is a non-binding admission plan; if accepted, you have until May 1st to decide if you will attend. You are permitted to apply to more than one college using early action.

- Early Decision (ED):

When applying under this plan you are making a commitment that if accepted, you will withdraw all other college applications and attend that college. You may only apply early decision to one school. Deadlines for early decision are usually due in early November. Early decision should only be used by students who have thoroughly researched college options, visited several campuses and discussed this decision at length with their family and their counselor.

WHEN DO YOU APPLY?

- Restrictive Early Action (REA)

Differs from school to school. Some schools only allow you to apply Early to their institution, which prevents you from going ED or EA anywhere else. Others prevent you from going ED elsewhere but will allow you to go EA to other schools.

- Priority (PRI):

The definition of a priority deadline will vary from school to school. In general, applying by this deadline ensures that you will receive the best consideration for admission as well as for merit-based scholarships and invitations to special programs. In some cases applicants are required to apply by a priority deadline in order to be considered for scholarships or financial aid or to guarantee housing availability.
